

ANNE DOBSON-MACK

Anne is a lawyer who has been with WorkSafeBC for 15 years. She is currently a Senior Prevention Advisor in the Prevention Practices & Quality department, providing legal and policy advice on occupational health & safety matters. Before joining Prevention, Anne worked as a Fair Practices Officer, helping complainants to resolve concerns involving all areas of WorkSafeBC, and as a Review Officer, adjudicating appeals of compensation decisions, largely focussing on Disability Awards and Return to Work. Before joining WorkSafeBC, Anne practised in the litigation department of Lawson Lundell. Anne moved to Vancouver to study law at UBC after she had completed a BA in history at Queen's and spent a cold year in Montreal working on her French. After clerking at the BC Supreme Court, Anne decided to put down roots in BC. In her spare time, she enjoys reading, running, and skiing with her family.
